Q. "HOW DO FISH BREATHE IN WATER ?"

CHERYL HEAD, OF CINCINNATI, OH., WINS A PRIZE FOR THIS QUESTION.

© 1979 United Feature Syndicate, Inc. T.M. Reg. U.S. Pat. Off. 8/10

A. A fish must breathe oxygen to stay alive, just as you do. But a fish has gills instead of lungs. The gills are comb-like tissues filled with blood vessels. They are inside the fish's head on each side of its throat. When a fish breathes, it draws water through its mouth and forces it out over its gills. Oxygen in the water is absorbed through the thin surfaces of the gills into the fish's blood. If you watch a fish in a fish bowl, you can see it constantly opening and closing its mouth. This is because the fish is breathing, just as you are constantly inhaling and exhaling air.

You can win a World Almanac if your question is selected. Send your name and age to JOHNNY WONDER, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1336, (DA) Santa Cruz, CA 95061.
